Sugar at 4 cents sends cold chills through the man who disposed of his plantation stock six months ago. With the price of such staples increasing affairs in Honolulu should have a boom. Sugar is the chief product of the islands; if the price goes up everyone here will benefit by it. If it goes down the majority of the population suffers according as they may have interests in the trades of the country.

In good times, when money is plenty, prices are usually up. Even with a mere tendency to better times the prices in some establishments are sent skyward. But not with us. We sell you a Jewell Stove today for twelve dollars, next week or next year it will be the same unless the manufacturers can make them for less.

You know what the conventional stove for wood or coal amounts to in this country. Climatic conditions involve the expense of new stoves about once in four years; the old stove is thrown out and from fifteen to a hundred dollars are invested in a new one.

Ours are better than the conventional stove, that is, Jewell's is better and we sell Jewell's. In the first place the castings are thicker, consequently not so apt to rust or burn through. Every part of the Jewell is interchangeable; if a part breaks, wears, burns or rusts out it can be replaced.

In the United States a man buys a stove to last him ten years. It will do it only by the interchangeable part system. Another point in the Jewell. The top of the oven is covered with a preparation of asbestos which serves two purposes. It keeps the heat in the oven and prevents the top of that part of the stove from wearing out.

We have the Jewell in all sizes from $12 upward. Store open Saturday evening.
